1. A new barracks has been built in Polgárdi, north of the railroad station, 1 km north of the road to Jenő. The barracks consists of eight large buildings, and is occupied by Hungarian troops. It is occupied by an artillery unit and an armored battalion, each with 300 to 400 men. The armored battalion has only light tanks. It was brought here in the fall of 1951 from Tapolca.
2. In May 1952 a tent camp of non-permanent character was set up in the forested area 2.5 km northwest of Peremarton. This camp was occupied by Hungarian infantry, 1,500 to 2,000 men strong, who came from Várpalota. There is a considerable amount of traffic between the two points.
3. Since the summer of 1951, there has been considerable construction of a military character at Bakonykúti, 10 km northeast of Várpalota, and the work is not yet complete. It is a barracks complex and exercise area, connected with the Várpalota command.
